Utah State Accreditation Committee Report

The State Accreditation Committee is composed of the four NAAS Commissioners from Utah and meets as needed and regularly at commission meetings. Most communication is electronic.

The Utah State Accreditation Advisory Committee is composed of 30 members representing the various categories of schools in our state. The committee's main function is to meet, review, and assign a status based on the NAAS annual report. All NAAS Commissioners from Utah serve as members of this state advisory committee. Members serve on the committee as volunteers for such time as they can. There are no set terms or conditions of membership other than interest in school accreditation. New members are recruited to represent all school types and levels.

A group of team chairs who have been involved with the accreditation school improvement process since its implementation in 2000 was brought together to assist the state accreditation specialist in the area of school visits, protocols, and trainings. The group helped develop protocols and report templates for interim review visits and subsequent full team visits. The subsequent full-team visit protocols and a new report template incorporate and align with the revised NAAS Core Standards for accreditation. These protocols and report template are being implemented during the current school year.

Using the NAAS narrative model a new self-study guide was designed for and distributed to Special Purpose, Residential and Supplemental Education schools. The guide delineates the type of evidence that would demonstrate compliance. All non-public schools will be required to use the new guidelines. Public special purpose schools would have the option of using the format outlined in Collaborating for Student Achievement, Utah's school improvement process used for accreditation.

Issues from Annual Reports

With the implementation of the revised NAAS Core Standards with an emphasis on teaching and learning, we found fewer schools received "Advised" ranking. The SAC is determining areas of concern and "weighting" certain standard indicators to reflect and draw attention to particular issues in our schools.

The issue of teacher load, especially in the large urban schools, is still a concern for the SAC. Since 2001 Utah has used higher student load numbers than the NAAS standard. However, many schools still exceed these higher numbers. For the last several years, the SAC has given special attention to this matter as they considered the annual reports.

Preparation of professional personnel continues as a concern, particularly in small public schools and private schools of various categories. New guidelines for teacher licensing and endorsements create difficulties in finding teachers qualified in multiple content areas.

As a result of a multiple year effort, very few schools are not meeting the student to counselor ratio. Schools with high ratios are usually in fast growing areas urban areas.

Professional Development

Training for School Leadership Teams and prospective visiting team members continues to be held each year. Annual debriefing and training workshops are held for chairs to set protocol and standardized procedures, visit issues, etc. Occasionally on-site visits are designed and used to train new visiting team chairpersons.

Collaborating for Student Achievement, Utah's accreditation school improvement model was implemented during the 2000-2001 school year. During 2007-2008 school year several schools had a second full team on-site visit using this process. A new 2nd Round training has been implemented and made available to schools preparing for a subsequent visit. Three trainings were offered in the past year.

School Visits

Sixty (60) on-site full-team visits and fifty-five (55) on-site review visits for accreditation purposes are scheduled for the 2008-2009 year. Forty-six (46) Northwest accredited Utah schools are calendared for on-site visits. Fifteen (15) middle level schools accredited by Utah State Office of Education (USOE), using NAAS standards and protocols, are on the schedule. (Schedule attached.) Some Northwest provisional school visits are not on the schedule. Visits to provisional schools are scheduled at the convenience of the consultant hired to work with these schools. Reports of full-team visits are posted on the accreditation webpage. Reports of interim visits are for school use and are not posted.

Initial Applicant School Visits

Sixteen (16) applicant schools received initial visits by USOE personnel and are recommended for NAAS membership. These recommendations were approved by the state accreditation committee at the annual meeting October 27-28, 2008. Copies of all initial school visit reports have been sent to NAAS, the individual schools and are also available at USOE. Initial on-site reports are not online.

Full-team Visit Protocol

Visiting teams are composed of educators who have been trained in Collaborating for Student Achievement, received training specific for visiting team members and have been through the accreditation process in their own schools. Currently, there is a pool of over 300 trained educators to serve on visiting teams. Invitations to serve on visiting teams are sent electronically to educators within the same region and level as the school to be visited. Educators then volunteer for teams that match their interest and availability.

Team chairpersons are chosen from a group of trained administrators who have wide experience in the accreditation process. There are now over 30 active school or district level administrators that serve as team chairs. The visiting team chair is responsible to submit a report of the school visit using a template that ensures consistency, provides a uniform outline and includes commendations and recommendations. Recommendations of the visiting team are meant to guide the school until the next on-site visit, usually in six years. Hard copies are sent to the individual schools, district superintendents, and the Utah State Board of Education. Completed reports of the visiting teams are posted to the website.

Interim Review Visit Protocol

A new protocol for on-site interim visits was fully implemented for the 2007-2008 year. The most common term recommended by visiting teams is a six-year term with an interim review. The interim visit is designed to validate a school's implementation of the recommendations of the visiting team and continued progress in school improvement.

Private Special Purpose School Visits

Visits to special purpose and residential schools are usually chaired and scheduled by the school and a consultant hired to work with special purpose/residential schools. There are several trained educators from special purpose schools and residential treatment centers (RTCs) who periodically assist the consultant as members of the visiting teams to facilities in their local areas.

Marketing

Our webpage <http://www.usoe.k12.ut.us/curr/accred/default.htm> continues to provide information about accreditation, ---why and how a school may become accredited---materials for team chairs, a roster of accredited schools, a schedule of visits, links to other accreditation resources including Northwest, 3rd party accrediting organizations, etc. The website has been well received and appears to be visited by a variety of interested persons.

All completed reports of visiting teams for full team on-site visits dating from January 2003 are online. Reports are added as they are completed but not before the school receive a copy of the report. Hard copies of the visiting team reports are sent to the individual schools and district superintendents. The Utah State Board of Education is provided a summary report of each full-team on-site visit which includes the commendations and recommendations.

Glossary

Terms used in accreditation reports

Ratings

- Approved – A school is given an “Approved” rating when it equals, exceeds or has only minor deviations to the standards and indicators.
- Approved with comment – A school is given an “Approved w/c” when it is only slightly out of compliance with particular standards or indicators. “Approved w/c” may also be assigned when a school has on-going deviations for more than one year or has made limited improvement from the previous year(s).
- Advised – A school is given an “Advised” rating when it is not in compliance with the standards or has not made improvement in specific areas over two or more years. A school may also be “Advised” for filing an incomplete annual report.
- Warned – A school is usually given a warned rating when the school is not substantially in compliance with one or more standards. Warning is usually given after a school has been “Advised.” A school may be moved from “Approved” or “Approved w/c” when the lack of compliance is such that they should not be allowed to persist beyond the current year.
- Dropped – A school is classified as “Dropped” from membership after two consecutive “Warned” ratings. A school may also be “Dropped” if it is two years in arrears on dues payment, has not filed an annual report, is unable to contact, or has gone out of business without notifying NAAS.
- Withdrawn – A school is classified as “Withdrawn” when the school voluntarily resigns its accreditation and membership with NAAS. Schools withdraw for various reasons, i.e., change in ownership, going out of business, accreditation is no longer necessary, etc.

Provisional School

A provisional school is a school in its first three years of NAAS accreditation. A school has three years of provisional status to complete a self-study and develop a plan for school improvement culminating in a full-team onsite visit.
